1. With the formation of the East German Weather Service after World War II, its Potsdam office, which controls radio communications, was required to submit a monthly report concerning radio weather traffic to the Soviet High Commission. The Potsdam office had to report the periods during each day when the Service failed to broadcast on schedule, and give reasons for the failure and the duration of the disruption in service.
2. In addition to reporting its own radio transmission problems, the Service was required to report on the reception of foreign weather broadcasts. The East German Weather Service regularly monitors DEQ, Hamburg; SNR, Poland; YZZ, Yugoslavia; LZA, Bulgaria; YRR, Rumania, OEM, Austria; and BAB, Hungary.
3. As of 1 January 1954, the Soviet High Commission no longer will require this report. No reason has been given for the discontinuance of this information.
